Stoughton's Bitters.

☞ During the present sickly season, the use of STOUGHTON's BITTERS, (imported from London) will be found of great service, as preventive to disease, especially where there is an infectious atmosphere and a predisposition in the habit to contagion. It eminently braces the constitution, and renovates the whole system. It may be used instead of spirits in water, tea, or other drink. It restores lost appetite, expels worms in children, and, if regularly used during the fall season, will prevent the ague and fever. In short, it only needs to be tried, to convince every one of its great efficacy.

These Bitters may be had, with copious directions, (prepared at the original warehouse in London) in quart bottles at one fourth of the former charge for the same in vials, at R. and J. GRAY's book store, Alexandria, where a bottle is constantly kept open for trial. ☞ Also, at A. BUCK's, Fredericksburg.

THE MORALIST.—No. XI.

HOPE.

Where silent woods there dreary shade extend,
And give new horrors to the gloom of night,
If 'chance the swain his faultering footsteps bend,
In terror pausing, to some friendly light,
How gladsome beats his heart, when thro' the glade,
Piercing the clouds, he sees the Moon's mild ray,
Onward he springs, with light and vig'rous tread,
And hails the empress of the fainter day.—
Thus while thro' life's uncertain paths I rove,
Should dark despondence spread the gathering gloom,
May HOPE's fond lustre, streaming from above,
Dispel the bodings of a mournful doom;
And when sad symptoms mark my parting breath,
May HOPE's benignant beam illume the vale of death.

HOPE, says Dr. Johnson, is the chief blessing of man, and that hope only is rational of which we are certain that it cannot deceive.

Hope is necessary in every condition. The miseries of poverty, of sickness, of captivity, would, without this comfort, be unsupportable; nor does it appear that the happiest lot of terrestial existence can set us above the want of this general blessing; or that life, when the gifts of nature and fortune are accumulated upon it, would not still be wretched, were it not elevated and delighted by the expectation of some new possession, or some enjoyment yet behind, by which the wish shall be at last satisfied, and the heart filled up to the utmost extent. Yet hope is very fallacious, and promises what it seldom gives; but its promises are more valuable than the gifts of fortune, and it seldom frustrates us without assuring us of recompencing the delay by a great bounty.

The understanding of a man, naturally sanguine, may easily be vitiated by the luxous indulgence of hope, however necessary to the production of every thing great or excellent, as some plants are destroyed by too open an exposure to that sun which gives life and beauty to the vegetable world.

On the bed of sickness, what is our greatest comfort? Hope—that we shall recover to prolong, a little longer, the passage of life; or, should God will it otherwise, that we are prepared to appear before him in the world to come: for where there is no hope, there can be no endeavour, and without it there can be no caution.

It is seldom that we find men or places such as we expect them. He that has pictured a prospect upon his fancy, will receive little pleasure from his eyes—he that has anticipated the conversation of a wit, will wonder to what prejudice he owes his reputation. Yet it is necessary to hope, though hope should always be deluded; for hope itself is happiness, and its frustrations however frequent, are yet less dreadful than its extinction.

"Our powers owe much of their energy to our hopes; possunt quid posse videntur."——

Sweet HOPE! that still with fond delusive dreams,
Cheer'st the sad heart surcharged with grief and care,
My anguish'd mind longs for those healing streams
Which flow from thee, and charm beyond compare.
O deign to visit then my lonely cell,
And breathe thy influence on my wearied soul;
Come, pleasing flatterer, and smiling tell,
That yet my hours in happiness may roll;
That fortune's copious tide again shall flow;
That friends shall smile, and enemies repent;
That as in years I shall in wisdom grow,
And find each moment crown'd with sweet content.

THE TEARS OF DERVIN.

An Ancient Fragment.

——— Stately was the youthful Dervin the descendant of Goran, as the brown Oak on the Tremeer, and boldness like the Lion in his cave, dwelt in his heart.

Mora the beautiful daughter of Penleven, caught his eye; long were her tresses, and like the rose blushed her cheek; fragrant and white as the lilley of the green vale was her bosom, and softer than the plume on the Swan's neck.

At the shrill summons of the lark, did they leave their hamlets, and together on the hills of Tregare, eyed the first beam of the morning; at even tide by the pale ray of the moon, did they wander through the vale of Penervin, listened to the note of the lovely nightengale, and breathed did we here the atheists, the blasphem lons of France, yelling our praises a themselves our disciples. With unava nation did we behold the blood of m and innocent children, shed under the our solemn sanction, and flowing in streams. With deep felt horror, did cruelties innumerable and unutterable,

the sweet love tale in the twilight groves of Rosmer.

Daughter of innocence! cried the youth, when wilt thou be mine, and suffer happiness to beam on my soul? When I gaze on thy beauties, quick leaps my alarmed heart. Ah! soon wilt thou make me blest?

The sweet blush of innocence glowed on the cheek of the daughter of Penletren, and consenting silence dwelt on her lips ——but never, ah! never, were they to join! Sickness clouded the eye of the virgin, and the crimson of the new blown fainted on her cheek; she hung her head like the flower in the rain, and sunk on the pillow, like the ripe ear of corn before the sickle and the reaper.

Her hand gently clasped the hand of her beloved Dervin, her bosom heaved like the swelling wave, and while vision performed its office, stark stood her eye on the delight of her soul.

She raised her languid head, to kiss the wet cheek of her lover, when death struck her to the heart; she fell back—her glassy eye closed—and her last breath sighed the name of Dervin.

—— Pillar of my existence! exclaimed the frantic Dervin, with his lips on the pale hand of the dead—I will follow thee! stay awhile thy gentle spirit for the accompanying spirit of Dervin.

He wept—the valiant Dervin wept as a child, though brave as a Lion that roams tho' the Desart. Though he feared not the reddening glare of the Wolf's eye—though his arm slew the giant Bali'l, and left him to rot like a dead dog in the mountain; the tears coursed his cheek, like a torrent on the hills brow—dim shone his large rolling eye, as the hazy moon in a storm; and his heart dissolved like the snow in the sun beam.

Nor was the gallant youth ashamed to weep; for compassion is the sister of magnanimity; and pity is a kin to love.

Mora lies in her tomb; the bleak winds whistle over her; and the worm riots on her beauty.

Her cold ear listens not to the sighs of Dervin, who laments over her green turf; nor perceives her dim eye the wild emotion of the youth who lived, but for her.

He falls prostrate on her grave; he complains of the duration of life; he calls on the shade of his departed Mora—he dies.

Dervin sleeps by the side of his beloved Mora, while the village swains and damsels annually strew flowers on their grave, and learn the lesson of constancy from their pure example.

From the BALANCE.

THE PETITION OF
LIBERTY, PATRIOTISM AND REPUBLICANISM.

TO the dread Majesty of the Sovereign People, the petition of the undersigned humbly sheweth; that we, your petitioners, had greatly signalized ourselves and were supposed to have acquired immortal honor, during the revolution in this country; and that we have ever since demeaned ourselves virtuously, strictly adhering to the great principles of social order, opposing every species of tyranny, on one hand, and all kinds of licentiousness, on the other, and uniformly seeking the general good. When Warren fell, we were standing by his side, and his dying eyes were affectionately fixed on us. The gallant Montgomery we attended to the plains of Abram, and in our arms we supported the hero, in his last moments.—With the great Washington, both in the Marches, and afterward in the cabinet, we were domesticated: in tents of the immortal Green, and of Lincoln, the brave christian soldier, we were perfectly at home. Peyton Randolph, Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, John Jay, Henry Laurens, Governor Livingston, Governor Trumbull, Roger Sherman, and divers others, of prime note, were among our most familiar associates; their friendship and caresses were sincere, and did us honor. While mentioning the respectability of our former connections, we are constrained, in justice to ourselves, solemnly to avow the purity of our own motives, and the integrity of our conduct; and that we have never sought private emoluments at the expense of the public interests, nor have been seen in the train of dark plotting ambition: yet we are stigmatized, at home and abroad, as cheats and swindlers.

We, your petitioners, peg leave respectfully to represent, that, tho' guiltless and well deserving ourselves, we are suffering the loss of character and the pains of cruel mockings, from the attrocious conduct of those, we have presumed to counterfeit our persons and to call themselves by our names;—that there has been a combination of wicked men, to disparage us; that the ambitious and darkly designing have prostituted our names for the furtherance of their nefarious purposes, while the licentiousness, and behauched, who are aiming to subvert the venerable institutions, as well of religion, as of society, pretend that they have imbibed their principles in our school;—and that, scape-goat like, we are thus made to bear horrible inquities, not our own.—We are constrained to declare before your dread Majesty that swarms of impostors and cunning knaves begun this imposition, on the other side of the Atlantic, by assuming the names and wearing the liveries of your petitioners, for the vilest of purposes.—With unavailing indignation did we here the atheists, the blasphemers and fellons of France, yelling our praises and declaring themselves our disciples. With unavailing indignation did we behold the blood of men, women and innocent children, shed under the pretence of our solemn sanction, and flowing in a thousand streams. With deep felt horror, did we witness cruelties innumerable and unutterable, acted in our names, and the cause of slavery and universal domination advanced by our authority. Not to dwell longer on the unmerited disgraces we have suffered abroad, we supplicate your attention to the disgraces, which, from manifold arts of knavery, are accumulating upon us even in this country.

Even here, our names are assumed and our garbs are worne, with a manifest view to swindle the public. Men the most aritrary, both in temper and principles, make boisterous professions of friendship towards us; and cunningly nickname our veteran champions and tried friends, to render them odious. Judases betray us with a kiss. Hungry seekers of offices for which they are totally unfit, equally bepraise and disparage us. Crafty cheats and impostors, by their loud affected zeal, and under cover of a pretended alliance with us, impose on the weak and credulous, and thrust back and overtop real merit.—Thus, for no kind of fault of ours, we are suffering a foul and increasing degradation, which, according to the present course of things, must soon terminate in universal scorn and contempt. Direful are our presages, that, after all our services to mankind and to this country in particular, we shall soon be considered as vagabonds and cheats, and be banished the realm; and our painful apprehensions on this head are coupled with the despairing consideration, that if banished from this country, we can have no assylum under the sun; ah! that, over the whole wide world, every door will be shut against us.

To you, the Sovereign People, we have, with great humility, exposed our pitiable case: from you only can we hope for redress. Deign, most puissant, to cast a look of benignity toward your humble supplicants; and to use such speedy and efficacious measures as your sovereign wisdom shall suggest, for preventing our indelible disgrace and eternal exile, and for restoring us to the respectable rank which we had formerly the honour of holding; and we, your petitioners, &c.

NEW YORK, October 7.

Yesterday arrived ship Maryland, capt. Wickham, in 31 days from London. By her we have received a regular file of the Morning Herald to the 31st August. We are also indebted to capt. Wickham, and a friend in town, for a regular file of the Morning Post to the 1st of September, inclusive, and Lloyd's List to the 30th of August. In these papers the affairs of Ireland still make a considerable figure, arrests were daily taking place, and on the 23d of August an immense depot of Military Stores was discovered in Dublin, among which were, it is said, 34,000 pikes, 42,000 rounds of musket ball cartridges, tied up in parcels of 20 each, and 4 flints attached to each parcel, 246 hand grenades, boxes and bottles of powder, and almost every thing necessary for an army. A Hamburgh vessel had been seized at Drogheda, and the captain and crew made prisoners, in consequence of 300 stand of arms of foreign manufacture being discovered in the neighbouphood, supposed to have been landed from her. It would appear that the volunteer corps in Britain were too numerous, the services of some of them had been rejected, and great dissatisfaction prevailed in consequence. The communication with the continent was very uncertain, as the French took every precaution to prevent the situation of their country from being known abroad. It appears, however, that their exertions continue increasing in proportion to the difficulties they expect to encounter; a number of ships of war were building the different ports of France, and every endeavour using to render their marine respectable. Two bankers had been sent to the Temple for giving bills of exchange on Hamburgh and Frankfort for 3.000,000 of livres, destined for the use of Louis XVIII, subscribed by some royalists in France since his refusal to resign his right to the throne of France was known.

In the Mediterranean capt. Gourdoun, commanding a division of French frigates, captured on the 15th August, about 12 leagues from Cape Sicire, an English corvette, a brig and two pinks. These four vessels arrived at Toulon on the 15th.

A counter expedition from G. Britain against France is also strongly talked of. Plots and conspiracies in France again the First Consul are also mentioned, but shewn to be without foundation. Russia and Prussia continue undecided. Spain is still neutral. Ireland is in a state of suppressed commotion, that shews itself daily, and is only prevented by powerful exertion, from breaking into open and terrible insurrection.

Mr. G. W. Ervine, our Consul at London, was presented to the King on the 31st August at the royal levee, by Mr. Munro.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12.

HEALTH-OFFICE,
OCTOBER 12.

The Committee of Health report four deaths for the 24 hours ending this morning at 10 o'clock.

They acknowledge, with gratitude, the receipt of Twenty Dollars from an absent citizen, and Ten Dollars from Mr. Josiah Faxon, for the use of the distressed and numerous poor of this place.

The committee being sensibly concerned at the fatal effects which come under their notice daily, and which are evidently produced by the prevailing terror now operating on the minds of a great proportion of their fellow-citizens, and which has impelled them in many instances to a desertion of persons afflicted with disease of almost any species, the consequences of which conduct is shocking to the feelings of humanity:—The committee cannot therefore refrain from thus noticing the unhappy effects of such procedure; and from earnestly recommending to those who labour under fearful impressions, and cannot remedy them, either to leave the Town or to be more reserved in the communication of their fears to others, as measures the most proper to be pursued at the present distressful period.* At the same time, for the consolation, and confidence, of all those residents who feel not so terribly impressed, the committee beg leave to solicit their attention generally, to what cannot be unknown to several of them individually, viz. That the committee, who have visited in almost every House in Town, where any person has either been sick, or died, are living proofs (and ought they think to be convincing) that the prevailing disorder is not so contagious, as it is generally believed to be; this circumstance of itself, ought they think, to calm the fears of the timerous, and induce an attention to those, who either are, or may be, taken sick, and prove an alleviation of their sufferings from all those in health, whether friends, relatives, or neighbours, to distressed humanity.

* This observation is more particularly intended for and recommended to the attention of the aged, the respectable and observing part of the community.

ANDREW JAMIESON,
Chairman.

Extract of a letter from Copenhagen, dated July 24, 1803, to a gentleman in Salem.

"The English are detested in this place by all classes of people. A few days ago, an American supercargo of a ship entered one of the batteries. They immediately took him to the guard house (supposing him to be an Englishman) and were preparing to put him in irons, but on being convinced of his being an American, they immediately set him at Liberty, asking pardon for treating him in that manner, saying they supposed him to be an Englishman."

A New Catechism for the Ladies.

Q. For what end did you come into the world?
A. To get a husband.
Q. What is the way to get a husband?
A. To dress, dance, chat, play, and go to all public places, except to church.
Q. What is the duty of a husband?
A. To please a wife.
Q. What is the duty of a wife?
A. To please herself, if she can.
Q. What are the other duties of a fine lady?
A. To be deaf to the voice of duns—to the entreaties of the poor: dumb to a husband's chidings, and blind to country cousins.

THE SWISS EMIGRANT.

FAREWELL, farewell, my native land,
A long farewell to life and thee!
On thy last rock I lingering stand,
Thy last rude rock how dear to me!

Once more I view thy vallies fair,
But dimly view, with tearful eye;
Once more I breathe thy healthful air,
But breathe it in how deep a sigh!

Ye vales with downy verdure spread,
Ye groves that drink the sparkling stream,
As bursting from the mountain's head
Its foaming waves in silver gleam;

Ye lakes that catch the golden beam
That floods with fire yon peak of snow,
As evening vapours bluely stream
And stilly roll their volumes slow;

Scenes, on this bursting heart impress'd
By every thrill of joy, of woe;
The bliss of childhood's vacant breast,
Of warmer youth's empassion'd glow;

The tears by filial duty shed
Upon the low, the peaceful tomb;
Where sleep, too blest, the rev'rend dead,
Unconscious of their country's doom.

Say! can Helvetia's patriot child,
A wretched exile, bear to roam,
Nor sink upon the lonely wild,
Nor die to leave his native home?

His native home!—no home has he—
He scorns in servile yoke to bow,
He scorns the land no longer free,
Alas—he has no country now!

Ye snow clad Alps whose mighty mound,
Great NATURE'S adamantine wall,
In vain opposed your awful bound
To check the prone descending Gaul;

What Hunter now with dearing leaps
Shall chase the Ibex o'er your rocks,
Who clothe with vines your craggy steeps,
Who guard from wolves your rambling flocks?

While low the free born sons of toil
Lie sunk amid the slaughter'd brave,
To freedom true, the stubborn soil
Shall pine, and starve the puny slave,

Spoilers, who pour'd your rav'ning bands
To gorge on Latium's fertile plains,
And fill'd your gold rapacious hands
From regal domes and sculptur'd fanes,

What seek ye here? Our niggard earth,
Nor gold, nor sculptur'd trophies owns;
Our wealth was peace, and guileless mirth,
Our trophies are our tyrant's bones!

Burst not my, heart, as dimly swell
MORAT'S proud glories on my view;
Heroic scenes, a long farewell,
I fly from madness and from you!

Thou vanquish'd land once proud and free,
Where first this fleeting breath I drew;
This heart must ever beat for thee,
In absence near—in misery true!

DIED—on Monday evening last Mr. Jacob Ressler, tallow-chandler, an old and respectable inhabitant of this town.

—— Same day Mrs. Eva Sabina Swoope, relict of Mr. Michael Swoope, late Merchant of this place.

—— Yesterday Mrs. Davidson, wife of Capt. James Davidson.

——Mrs. Campbell, consort of Capt. James Campbell.

The Sale
of the property advertised on the 18th of August last by us, in pursuance of the decree of the circuit court of the district of Columbia, for the county of Alexandria, at the last June term of the said court, and in pursuance of the last will and testament of Lewis Hipkins, deceased, to take place on this day at the house of Francis Daniel, at the Little Falls of the Potomac, is unavoidably postponed until Thursday the 10th day of November next, at which place and on which day, if fair, if not the next fair day, will positively be sold by us, at public auction, to the highest bidder for ready money,
The following Property, viz.
One undivided third part of 207 acres of Land, in the said district, near the said Little Falls, upon which are Merchant Mills, with three pair of French burr mill stones, and every necessary and convenient machinery for manufacturing flour to the best advantage; also a brewery and distillery, miller's house, a brewer and distiller's house and sundry other improvements, This property will be shewn to any person who may incline to purchase it, by the said Francis Daniel, at any time before the sale.
A tract of Land in Fairfax county, about three miles from the said Little Falls, containing 207 acres, upon which is a dwelling house, in which Mrs Susan Wren lives, and sundry other improvements; about two thirds of this land are cleared, and the remainder in wood; it is good farming land. Mr. William Waters, who lives near it, will shew this land to any person or persons who may incline to purchase it, at any time previous to the sale.
Mrs. Susan Wren, who was the widow of the said Lewis Hipkins, has a right of dower in the aforesaid property. ☞ The sale will commence at twelve o'clock.
